

25X1A9a

CPYRGHT

William P. Fallon, 67; Retired CIA Economist

William P. Fallon, 67, a retired Central Intelligence Agency economist, died Monday of cancer at his home, 3721 Suitland rd. se.

Mr. Fallon, who was born in Columbus, Ohio, interrupted his education at Ohio State University to join the Army Air Service in 1917. He served in France and was one of the youngest U.S. pilots in World War I.

He continued his education after the war and received a bachelor of science from New York University and a master of arts degree from Columbia University. While at Columbia, he was elected to Beta Gamma Sigma, a scholastic honorary fraternity.

Mr. Fallon

Mr. Fallon entered government service in 1934 as an economist with the National Recovery Administration. He worked for the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the Munitions Board and the Office of International Programs, then joined the CIA in 1951. He retired in 1962.

Mr. Fallon was a founder member of the Order of Daedalians, an organization of World War I flyers, a charter member of the Air Force Association and a member of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church.